Message from the Editor-in-Chief

The study of sexuality and sexual health is, by definition, an interdisciplinary endeavor, engaging scholars from many fields. Thus, Sexes encourages a diversity of perspectives, ranging from physical, chemical, biomedical, psychological, behavioral, sociological, and anthropological/cross-cultural to public health, legal, and historical.

Sexes is dedicated to the publication and worldwide dissemination of inter- and multidisciplinary research in the sexual sciences. It is also designed as a scholarly forum for reporting research, promoting the global understanding of various topics related to sexual health, and demonstrating the relevance/application/implication of the results of scientific inquiry for issues surrounding sexuality.

Editor-in-Chief

Prof. Dr. David L. Rowland
